

Sister Patricia Pullman (formerly Sister Edward Lorraine) – 70 Years

Sister Patricia Pullman, formerly Sister Edward Lorraine, says she has never regretted saying “yes” to the call of religious life. “The people I have met in school and pastoral work have given me reason to thank God daily for my vocation,” she says.

Sister Patricia became a Sister of Saint Joseph shortly after high school and was soon teaching in Catholic schools. She taught at St. Monica’s, Sacred Heart, Corpus Christi, and St. Mary’s in Waterloo. While at St. Mary’s she became principal. She spent several years in administration and was principal at Guardian Angels, St. Stanislaus, St. Agnes in Avon, St. Stephen in Geneva, and

Our Lady of Lourdes. Sister also was consultant and then superintendent for religious education for the Diocese.

“As the years evolved,” says Sister Patricia, “I became more active in various parishes and was drawn to parish ministry.” That draw led Sister to becoming the pastoral associate for St. Boniface.

Today, Sister Patricia continues her work in prayer ministry at the SSJ Motherhouse.
